

How Can Christians Respond More Effectively to the Sexual Revolution?

The last few decades have witnessed a radical and far-reaching transformation of western attitudes to sex, marriage and gender. Feeling persecuted and under siege, Christians often react defensively or negatively. But what if the sexual revolution has something to teach us? What if we faced up to our own sub-biblical shame culture? And what if we began our critique of the revolution in terms of its failed promises rather than our moral rules? In this seminar we explore what this new apologetic platform begins to look like.

Glynn Harrison was formerly Professor and Head of Department of Psychiatry, University of Bristol, UK, where he was also a practicing psychiatrist. Now, as an author and speaker, he is interested in issues at the interface between biblically-based faith and psychology, neuroscience, and psychiatry, as well as wider issues of culture and Christian worldview. His most recent book A Better Story: God, Sex and Human Flourishing turns a critical eye to the sexual revolution.
